Chapter 166: The Creation of the Dark Silver Celestial Heart

As Sung Jin-Woo, the God of Shadows and Life and the God of Creation and Abundance, continued to observe the growth and power of his descendants, a thought began to stir within him. His son, Sung Su-Ho, and his grandchildren, such as Sung Ye-Jun and Sung Ye-Rin, had all ascended to wield the power of three hearts. Their immense strength, granted through their divine heritage and the system, had raised them to a level of god-like abilities. However, Sung Jin-Woo, ever the creator and visionary, knew that even in this vast and limitless expanse of divine power, there was always room for growth.

Thus, with the utmost care and consideration, Sung Jin-Woo created a new heart — one that would be the pinnacle of divine power, one that would surpass the limits even of his own divine form.

The Dark Silver Celestial Heart: A Creation Beyond Compare

The Dark Silver Celestial Heart was a unique and powerful creation, a heart that transcended the limits of ordinary divine craftsmanship. Sung Jin-Woo forged this heart not only as a source of his ever-expanding mana pool but also as a conduit for his most devastating ability — the Shadow Breath.

1. Original Heart: The heart that Sung Jin-Woo was born with, now divine after his ascension to godhood. This heart had long been the source of his strength, the core of his being that provided him with endless endurance, vitality, and power.

2. Second Heart: Black Heart: A divine heart that acted as the first and most important source of mana. It was through this heart that Sung Jin-Woo drew his immense magical power, enabling him to weave shadows, shape life, and create entire worlds.

3. Third Heart: Dark Silver Celestial Heart: This newly created heart was automatically divine upon its creation. It served not only as an even greater source of mana but also as the wellspring for Sung Jin-Woo's Shadow Breath. With each exhale, his breath turned into a deadly weapon capable of turning any living being into a corpse and transforming their very souls into shadows under his command.

The Power of the Dark Silver Celestial Heart

The Dark Silver Celestial Heart was not just a source of power; it was a symbol of Sung Jin-Woo's mastery over life and death. The essence of this heart allowed him to control the fabric of existence itself, manipulating both shadows and souls with devastating ease.

Source of Mana Pool: The Dark Silver Celestial Heart amplified Sung Jin-Woo's mana pool beyond the limits of even his previous divine hearts. This endless reservoir of power allowed him to sustain his vast array of abilities, summon armies of shadows, and create divine weapons at will. The sheer magnitude of his mana ensured that he could continue to wield unparalleled influence over the realms.

The Shadow Breath: The Dark Silver Celestial Heart also provided Sung Jin-Woo with his most potent ability — Shadow Breath. This deadly breath, which he could unleash at will, was capable of annihilating entire legions. It would disintegrate all life in its path, turning living beings into corpses in an instant and dragging their souls into the shadow realm. The transformation of souls into shadows under his command made them bound to him for eternity.

The destructive power of Shadow Breath was unmatched, a gift that allowed Sung Jin-Woo to shape the balance of life and death. It was the epitome of his dual roles as both a creator and a destroyer, a god who wielded the threads of existence itself.

A Legacy of Power and Creation

The creation of the Dark Silver Celestial Heart marked a new chapter in Sung Jin-Woo's journey as a god. While his son, Sung Su-Ho, and his grandchildren had ascended to wield immense power through their own three hearts, Sung Jin-Woo’s new heart was a reminder that no matter how far one ascended, there was always the potential for further creation, growth, and mastery.

This heart was not only a gift to Sung Jin-Woo himself but also a testament to his infinite capacity to create, shape, and expand the boundaries of life, death, and power. With the Dark Silver Celestial Heart, he had reached an even higher tier of divine strength, ensuring that he would remain the most formidable being in all of existence. His power continued to grow as he shaped the multiverse, his legacy now bound to the endless fabric of creation.

As he stood in his throne room, surrounded by his divine creations, Sung Jin-Woo knew that his reign, and that of his descendants, was destined to last forever — a legacy written in the very hearts of gods.
